HOW NASDME “FOCUS GROUPS” WORK FOR YOU

NASDME's Focus Groups are held to allow educational leaders the opportunity to influence the development, refinement, and delivery of the products and services entering the educational setting in the U.S. so that those products and services can best meet the needs of migratory children. Because the schools and regions that NASDME's administrators lead are important consumers, NASDME gives them a unique opportunity to comment on and shape what goes into the schools they serve.

At NASDME's National Conference, corporate client representatives receive a private, 90-minute panel discussion with five leading educators. The agenda is determined by the corporate client and can address any issue. The client garners incredibly valuable information on those agenda issues and topics. Panels of expert administrators provide frank, candid insight and feedback that clients typically incorporate to upgrade their products and services and to modify their marketing plans.

NASDME is proud to work directly and closely with State Directors and administrators from across the country. These State Directors and administrators are seasoned, leading experts in the field of migrant education.

1. What is a focus group?

A focus group is a ninety (90) minute session where the corporate client representatives receive candid feedback on specific topics from five administrators from Migrant Ed Regions from all over the country. All topics discussed are strictly confidential.

2. Who sets the agenda for the panel?

The agenda is set by the client in consultation with the administrator chairing the focus group. Thus, the contact person from the corporate client and their focus group panel chairperson are the two key agenda and process setters. The key to a successful panel is careful planning and clearly stated and understood expectations by both parties.

3. What types of items should/could be included in the pre-conference planning?

- a. Selection of clearly articulated focused topic(s) for the focus group such as a marketing plan for a specific commodity or service.
- b. Identification and distribution of any materials to be provided to the panel members prior to the sessions.
- c. If desired, development and distribution of a questionnaire to the focus group members in advance of the session. If the information requested is required prior to the focus group then the questionnaire needs to be distributed, collected and collated well in advance of the meeting of the focus group panel.
- d. Identification of any special facilities and/or audiovisual equipment required for the focus group. For example, the corporate client may want to videotape the discussion. The client is responsible for all A/V costs and internet arrangements.

4. How do the panel members know what the client expects during the focus group session?

With good communication and planning by the corporate client and the panel chairperson, the following information and activities further assists panel members:

- a. An agenda prepared in advance and circulated to all participants.
- b. Distribution of materials to describe the client's company and the service or commodity to be focused on during the focus group.
- c. Distribution of a questionnaire, if this is part of the process.

5. How does a focus group function?

- a. To enable the corporate client to focus on the content, not the process, the focus group is chaired by the NASDME-selected chairperson.
- b. The chairperson calls on the NASDME members to introduce themselves and briefly describe their regions.
- c. The chairperson introduces any other guests in attendance.
- d. The chairperson and corporate client introduce the agenda.
- e. The chairperson leads the corporate client and NASDME team through the agenda.
- f. Allowance is made for a break of 5 minutes approximately halfway through the session.
- g. Time is built-in for the chairperson or corporate client to sum up the session, determine any follow-up activities required, and/or identify any further steps to be followed.
- h. Wrap-up of the panel session is made by the corporate client and the chairperson.
